QN wins Community Practitioner of the Year

Congratulations to Ruth Oshikanlu QN who has just won the CPHVA Community Practitioner of the Year 2014. Ruth is a Health Visitor and Parenting Coach working in London and a member of the CNO BME Advisory Group. She says, 'I feel very honoured to have won the CPHVA Community Practitioner of the Year 2014. I plan to use the award title as a platform to continue to champion Health Visiting and act as a positive role model for my colleagues, other community nurses and clients. I honestly believe that I would not have achieved success in my career as quickly as I did if I had not become a Queen's Nurse. As such I would urge any nurse working in the community to become one as it will give you the support and the skills to make a difference to the clients you serve and you will also grow personally and professionally.'
